Acting as both a complementary learning tool and a social activity, trips provide pupils with real-life interpretations of the topics they are learning. While our school trips are mainly educational efforts to contextualise learning, they serve a much greater purpose. Through experiencing an out-of-school setting, pupils understand that learning is not confined to a classroom and that it is, in fact, a lifelong skill that exists within us.

Every trip planned by the school is designed to include activities that encourage creative problem-solving, foster interpersonal and intrapersonal skills, and strengthen the bond between Belvedere pupils and teachers.
